Appendix 3 – Consultation Comments

| Are there any other methods you think West Lindsey Distri | Council Response |
|---|--|
| Supportive | |
| This seems to be the only tool available, supermarkets really need to take responsibility for this. It should not be a cost for the tax payer to cover. | The Council welcomes the supportive comments given in relation to the scheme and is pleased that the positive work is recognised in the community. |
| I think it is a fair one. I know it is hard for the supermarkets to keep an eye on trollies being taken then abandoned, so to help the WLDC supermarkets should also think what they can do as well. | |
| The companies should be fined, should it be other items found belonging to individuals then they are fined, supermarkets should be made to be totally responsible for their trollies and ensuring that they cannot be removed from the premises. If they fail their duties then they should be fined. | |
| Why would you do anything different its clearly working because I don't think there is an issue with shopping trolleys in Gainsborough. | |
| Not Compositive | |
| Not Supportive Vos appoint a local contractor to do the job, this would then | The Council assents that not |
| Yes appoint a local contractor to do the job. this would then provide employment for someone local, this would free up the | The Council accepts that not all comments in response |
| council resorces and stop the excessive charges you implement on | are positive and that there is |
| the shops. | still a need to tackle the issues relating to abandoned shopping trolleys. |
| Enforcing on or Prosecuting Supermarkets | |
| Enforcing the local supermarkets to have "smartstop" type trolleys | The Council has not methods available for forcing the supermarkets to do anything in regards to shopping trolleys. We will continue to engage with them as required, but do not have any formal powers, other than the Schedule 4 to |
| Ensuring that there is a trolley warden on at all times in supermarkets | address this issue. The Council is in agreement that supermarkets should seek to do more, however this is their decision. |
| Prosecute the trolley dumpers for tipping. It's the samel people that are responsible for regular trolley dumping on their route home from the supermarket eg on Foxby Hill from Tesco | |
| Better police patrols - abandoned trolleys are a part of the big issue - anti social behaviour | |
| Fixed penalty notice issued to each supermarket for each | |
| abandoned trolley, notice to them to recover each trolley. | |
| Fees | |
| I don't think a £100 charge is enough to make the major supermarkets come up with an idea to stop there trolley being taken, but a £1000 charge per trolley would force the company to | It is not a fine that is issued, but a fee for recovery. The Council believes that its fee |

| come up with an idea $\begin{picture}(20,0)\put(0,0){\line(1,0){100}}\put(0,0){\l$ | schedule from between £75 and £100 per trolley is appropriate and recovers the necessary costs incurred. |
|--|--|
| Would it be legal to impose a fine for the worst supermarket offenders? As I understand some supermarkets do not want to pay £100 per trolley. Maybe if it was £50 | |
| | |
| Supermarkets | |
| Supermarkets could elevate abandoned shopping trolleys if they put restrictors on the trolleys which stop them going past a selected border around the supermarket. West Lindsey should suggest this investment to Supermarkets could save money and time in the long run! | The Council will seek to feedback these suggestions to supermarkets as part of the process that has been undertaken. |
| Promotion of personal shopping trolleys/bags to those that take shopping home in supermarket trolleys. People having to put money in a trolley should also deter it. Ask supermarkets to install the trolley boundaries ensuring trolleys can't be taken off the premises. Saves you a job and them the cost. If they don't agree to implement charge them £100 per trolley. | |
| Supermarkets could go back to a deposit on the trolleys | |
| It's mainly Tescos trolleys I see. Maybe they should introduce the £1 charge like the others do | |
| Maybe go back to having to put pound in trolleys | |
| I wish I could cos charging supermarkets only increases our weekly shopping bill as does shop lifting. | |
| Supermarkets make huge profits, none of which are passed on fairly to food producers or customers, so charge them the absolute maximum that you can for returning their trolleys; you rarely see the ones that are coin operated abandoned, it's the free to use ones - these supermarkets are doing nothing themselves to reduce removal of trolleys. (The wheel locking systems don't work, you only have to steer a few inches off course to bypass them!) I live on Washington Street and there are always loads around there and all along Sandsfield Lane area up as far as Tesco. | |
| Wardens at exit to supermarkets to prevent removal | |
| Engage with supermarkets to put better practices in place to stop trolleys leaving their sites in the first place. | |
| Task the supermarkets with the job of collecting them. | |
| You could consider a discount for stores that have coin/token devices installed to encourage trolley returns | |
| The retailers who have shopping trolleys ultimately responsible for them, leaving their premises and should prevent them from leaving by means of the wheels lock off when they leave their property, so the trolley cannot be moved leave at the property | |
| Make the supermarkets take the trolleys in at night time so people don't take them and then dump them | |
| Other | |

| council for help in regards to the theft of they trolley and in doing so this just might cut down on council workers having to recover the trolleys. Go out to tender locally Use a local charitable organisation to create sustainability for that organisation such as Feeding Gainsborough. They work with all the supermarkets and that relationship could work for them both. It's not the supermarkets fault that people take and abandon their trollets Who finds them? Do council workers go looking? Are you the council reliant on residents reporting them? This is unclear from the reported plan on website Some supermarkets use electronic tagging so you cant push the trolley beyond the perimeter Supermarkets should all have coin operated trollies to prevent random snatching. The supermarkets in town all need to be on board with the scheme - they need to shoulder the burden / not the council snd tax payers. CCTV in trolley hotspots Supermarkets should be charged at least 20% more if they cannot be bothered to recover themselves. Repurpose them in the community. Why is it a council problem? Abandoned trolleys should be treated like any other scrap metal dumped in the street. It is the onus of the loser to report the loss or theft of an item to the police - it is up to them to place identifying markings on the trolleys so that they can be reclaimed - if neither of these actions take place they should be scrapped after 28 days. If there are certain areas of the town which abandoned trolleys are more of a problem could a scheme be set up that involves people/children to collect them for a fee who live in that community. Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river of possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that d | Agree with the shops to have a designated collection/returns point and all trolleys to have a number on then and customers asked for name and address so if the trolley is not returned to the designated returns point then the shops can ask the police and | The Council will seek to feedback these suggestions to supermarkets as part of the process that has been |
|--|---|--|
| Use a local charitable organisation to create sustainability for that organisation such as Feeding Gainsborough. They work with all the supermarkets and that relationship could work for them both. It's not the supermarkets fault that people take and abandon their trollets Who finds them? Do council workers go looking? Are you the council reliant on residents reporting them? This is unclear from the reported plan on website. Some supermarkets use electronic tagging so you cant push the trolley beyond the perimeter. Supermarkets should all have coin operated trollies to prevent random snatching. The supermarkets in town all need to be on board with the scheme - they need to shoulder the burden / not the council snd tax payers. CCTV in trolley hotspots. Supermarkets should be charged at least 20% more if they cannot be bothered to recover themselves. Repurpose them in the community. Why is it a council problem? Abandoned trolleys should be treated like any other scrap metal dumped in the street. It is the onus of the loser to report the loss or theft of an item to the police - it is up to them to place identifying markings on the trolleys so that they can be reclaimed - if neither of these actions take place they should be scrapped after 28 days. If there are certain areas of the town which abandoned trolleys are more of a problem could a scheme be set up that involves people/children to collect them for a fee who live in that community. Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river of possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be diffi | council for help in regards to the theft of they trolley and in doing so this just might cut down on council workers having to recover | = |
| Use a local charitable organisation to create sustainability for that organisation such as Feeding Gainsborough. They work with all the supermarkets and that relationship could work for them both. It's not the supermarkets fault that people take and abandon their trollets Who finds them? Do council workers go looking? Are you the council reliant on residents reporting them? This is unclear from the reported plan on website Some supermarkets use electronic tagging so you cant push the trolley beyond the perimeter Supermarkets should all have coin operated trollies to prevent random snatching. The supermarkets in town all need to be on board with the scheme - they need to shoulder the burden / not the council snd tax payers. CCTV in trolley hotspots Supermarkets should be charged at least 20% more if they cannot be bothered to recover themselves. Repurpose them in the community. Why is it a council problem? Abandoned trolleys should be treated like any other scrap metal dumped in the street. It is the onus of the loser to report the loss or theft of an item to the police - it is up to them to place identifying markings on the trolleys so that they can be reclaimed - if neither of these actions take place they should be scrapped after 28 days. If there are certain areas of the town which abandoned trolleys are more of a problem could a scheme be set up that involves people/children to collect them for a fee who live in that community. Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river of look at dealing with individuals who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would b | | |
| organisation such as Feeding Gainsborough. They work with all the supermarkets and that relationship could work for them both. It's not the supermarkets fault that people take and abandon their trollets Who finds them? Do council workers go looking? Are you the council reliant on residents reporting them? This is unclear from the reported plan on website Some supermarkets use electronic tagging so you cant push the trolley beyond the perimeter Supermarkets should all have coin operated trollies to prevent random snatching. The supermarkets in town all need to be on board with the scheme - they need to shoulder the burden / not the council snd tax payers CCTV in trolley hotspots Supermarkets should be charged at least 20% more if they cannot be bothered to recover themselves. Repurpose them in the community. Why is it a council problem? Abandoned trolleys should be treated like any other scrap metal dumped in the street. It is the onus of the loser to report the loss or theft of an item to the police - it is up to them to place identifying markings on the trolleys so that they can be reclaimed - if neither of these actions take place they should be scrapped after 28 days. If there are certain areas of the town which abandoned trolleys are more of a problem could a scheme be set up that involves people/children to collect them for a fee who live in that community. Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river if possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their is | | |
| supermarkets and that relationship could work for them both. It's not the supermarkets fault that people take and abandon their trollets Who finds them? Do council workers go looking? Are you the council reliant on residents reporting them? This is unclear from the reported plan on website Some supermarkets use electronic tagging so you cant push the trolley beyond the perimeter Supermarkets should all have coin operated trollies to prevent random snatching. The supermarkets in town all need to be on board with the scheme - they need to shoulder the burden / not the council snd tax payers CCTV in trolley hotspots Supermarkets should be charged at least 20% more if they cannot be bothered to recover themselves. Repurpose them in the community. Why is it a council problem? Abandoned trolleys should be treated like any other scrap metal dumped in the street. It is the onus of the loser to report the loss or theft of an item to the police - it is up to them to place identifying markings on the trolleys so that they can be reclaimed - if neither of these actions take place they should be scrapped after 28 days. If there are certain areas of the town which abandoned trolleys are more of a problem could a scheme be set up that involves people/children to collect them for a fee who live in that community. Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river if possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be heallenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their sevidence to support it, this may be something the Council can | , | |
| not the supermarkets fault that people take and abandon their trollets Who finds them? Do council workers go looking? Are you the council reliant on residents reporting them? This is unclear from the reported plan on website Some supermarkets use electronic tagging so you cant push the trolley beyond the perimeter Supermarkets should all have coin operated trollies to prevent random snatching. The supermarkets in town all need to be on board with the scheme - they need to shoulder the burden / not the council snd tax payers CCTV in trolley hotspots Supermarkets should be charged at least 20% more if they cannot be bothered to recover themselves. Repurpose them in the community. Why is it a council problem? Abandoned trolleys should be treated like any other scrap metal dumped in the street. It is the onus of the loser to report the loss or theft of an item to the police - it is up to them to place identifying markings on the trolleys so that they can be reclaimed - if neither of these actions take place they should be scrapped after 28 days. If there are certain areas of the town which abandoned trolleys are more of a problem could a scheme be set up that involves people/children to collect them for a fee who live in that community. Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river If possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be the hallenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their servicence to support it, this may be something the Council can | | |
| Who finds them? Do council workers go looking? Are you the council reliant on residents reporting them? This is unclear from the reported plan on website. Some supermarkets use electronic tagging so you cant push the trolley beyond the perimeter. Supermarkets should all have coin operated trollies to prevent random snatching. The supermarkets in town all need to be on board with the scheme - they need to shoulder the burden / not the council snd tax payers. CCTV in trolley hotspots Supermarkets should be charged at least 20% more if they cannot be bothered to recover themselves. Repurpose them in the community. Why is it a council problem? Abandoned trolleys should be treated like any other scrap metal dumped in the street. It is the onus of the loser to report the loss or theft of an item to the police - it is up to them to place identifying markings on the trolleys so that they can be reclaimed - if neither of these actions take place they should be scrapped after 28 days. If there are certain areas of the town which abandoned trolleys are more of a problem could a scheme be set up that involves people/children to collect them for a fee who live in that community. Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river lf possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their services evidence to support it, this may be something the Council can be something the | · | |
| council reliant on residents reporting them? This is unclear from the reported plan on website Some supermarkets use electronic tagging so you cant push the trolley beyond the perimeter Supermarkets should all have coin operated trollies to prevent random snatching. The supermarkets in town all need to be on board with the scheme - they need to shoulder the burden / not the council snd tax payers. CCTV in trolley hotspots Supermarkets should be charged at least 20% more if they cannot be bothered to recover themselves. Repurpose them in the community. Why is it a council problem? Abandoned trolleys should be treated like any other scrap metal dumped in the street. It is the onus of the loser to report the loss or theft of an item to the police - it is up to them to place identifying markings on the trolleys so that they can be reclaimed - if neither of these actions take place they should be scrapped after 28 days. If there are certain areas of the town which abandoned trolleys are more of a problem could a scheme be set up that involves people/children to collect them for a fee who live in that community. Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river of possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, lessifient who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their sevidence to something the Council can desire the something the Council can severe the cure market. | · | |
| council reliant on residents reporting them? This is unclear from the reported plan on website Some supermarkets use electronic tagging so you cant push the trolley beyond the perimeter Supermarkets should all have coin operated trollies to prevent random snatching. The supermarkets in town all need to be on board with the scheme - they need to shoulder the burden / not the council snd tax payers. CCTV in trolley hotspots Supermarkets should be charged at least 20% more if they cannot be bothered to recover themselves. Repurpose them in the community. Why is it a council problem? Abandoned trolleys should be treated like any other scrap metal dumped in the street. It is the onus of the loser to report the loss or theft of an item to the police - it is up to them to place identifying markings on the trolleys so that they can be reclaimed - if neither of these actions take place they should be scrapped after 28 days. If there are certain areas of the town which abandoned trolleys are more of a problem could a scheme be set up that involves people/children to collect them for a fee who live in that community. Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river of possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, lessifient who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their sevidence to something the Council can desire the something the Council can severe the cure market. | Who finds them? Do council workers go looking? Are you the | |
| tagging so you cant push the trolley beyond the perimeter Supermarkets should all have coin operated trollies to prevent random snatching. The supermarkets in town all need to be on board with the scheme - they need to shoulder the burden / not the council snd tax payers CCTV in trolley hotspots Supermarkets should be charged at least 20% more if they cannot be bothered to recover themselves. Repurpose them in the community. Why is it a council problem? Abandoned trolleys should be treated like any other scrap metal dumped in the street. It is the onus of the loser to report the loss or theft of an item to the police - it is up to them to place identifying markings on the trolleys so that they can be reclaimed - if neither of these actions take place they should be scrapped after 28 days. If there are certain areas of the town which abandoned trolleys are more of a problem could a scheme be set up that involves people/children to collect them for a fee who live in that community. Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river tif possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their to look at dealing with individuals is caught dumping the trolley and there is evidence to support it, this may be something the Council can support it, this may be something the Council can | | |
| Supermarkets should all have coin operated trollies to prevent random snatching. The supermarkets in town all need to be on board with the scheme - they need to shoulder the burden / not the council snd tax payers CCTV in trolley hotspots Supermarkets should be charged at least 20% more if they cannot be bothered to recover themselves. Repurpose them in the community. Why is it a council problem? Abandoned trolleys should be treated like any other scrap metal dumped in the street. It is the onus of the loser to report the loss or theft of an item to the police - it is up to them to place identifying markings on the trolleys so that they can be reclaimed - if neither of these actions take place they should be scrapped after 28 days. If there are certain areas of the town which abandoned trolleys are more of a problem could a scheme be set up that involves people/children to collect them for a fee who live in that community. Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river lif possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be treated to look at dealing with individuals who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be trolley and there is evidence to support it, this may be something the Council can deal with, however if an individual is caught dumping the trolley and there is evidence to support it, this may be something the Council can | the reported plan on website Some supermarkets use electronic | |
| random snatching The supermarkets in town all need to be on board with the scheme - they need to shoulder the burden / not the council snd tax payers CCTV in trolley hotspots Supermarkets should be charged at least 20% more if they cannot be bothered to recover themselves. Repurpose them in the community. Why is it a council problem? Abandoned trolleys should be treated like any other scrap metal dumped in the street. It is the onus of the loser to report the loss or theft of an item to the police - it is up to them to place identifying markings on the trolleys so that they can be reclaimed - if neither of these actions take place they should be scrapped after 28 days. If there are certain areas of the town which abandoned trolleys are more of a problem could a scheme be set up that involves people/children to collect them for a fee who live in that community. Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river of possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trolles outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their support it, this may be something the Council can | tagging so you cant push the trolley beyond the perimeter | |
| board with the scheme - they need to shoulder the burden / not the council snd tax payers CCTV in trolley hotspots Supermarkets should be charged at least 20% more if they cannot be bothered to recover themselves. Repurpose them in the community. Why is it a council problem? Abandoned trolleys should be treated like any other scrap metal dumped in the street. It is the onus of the loser to report the loss or theft of an item to the police - it is up to them to place identifying markings on the trolleys so that they can be reclaimed - if neither of these actions take place they should be scrapped after 28 days. If there are certain areas of the town which abandoned trolleys are more of a problem could a scheme be set up that involves people/children to collect them for a fee who live in that community. Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river of possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their this imay be something the Council can | Supermarkets should all have coin operated trollies to prevent | |
| CCTV in trolley hotspots Supermarkets should be charged at least 20% more if they cannot be bothered to recover themselves. Repurpose them in the community. Why is it a council problem? Abandoned trolleys should be treated like any other scrap metal dumped in the street. It is the onus of the loser to report the loss or theft of an item to the police - it is up to them to place identifying markings on the trolleys so that they can be reclaimed - if neither of these actions take place they should be scrapped after 28 days. If there are certain areas of the town which abandoned trolleys are more of a problem could a scheme be set up that involves people/children to collect them for a fee who live in that community. Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river If possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trolleys conceil can support it, this may be something the Council can | random snatching The supermarkets in town all need to be on | |
| Supermarkets should be charged at least 20% more if they cannot be bothered to recover themselves. Repurpose them in the community. Why is it a council problem? Abandoned trolleys should be treated like any other scrap metal dumped in the street. It is the onus of the loser to report the loss or theft of an item to the police - it is up to them to place identifying markings on the trolleys so that they can be reclaimed - if neither of these actions take place they should be scrapped after 28 days. If there are certain areas of the town which abandoned trolleys are more of a problem could a scheme be set up that involves people/children to collect them for a fee who live in that community. Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river if possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trolleys conceil can set the relieve to the support it, this may be something the Council can | board with the scheme - they need to shoulder the burden / not | |
| Supermarkets should be charged at least 20% more if they cannot be bothered to recover themselves. Repurpose them in the community. Why is it a council problem? Abandoned trolleys should be treated like any other scrap metal dumped in the street. It is the onus of the loser to report the loss or theft of an item to the police - it is up to them to place identifying markings on the trolleys so that they can be reclaimed - if neither of these actions take place they should be scrapped after 28 days. If there are certain areas of the town which abandoned trolleys are more of a problem could a scheme be set up that involves people/children to collect them for a fee who live in that community. Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river lf possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, ecallenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trolley and there is evidence to support it, this may be something the Council can | | |
| Repurpose them in the community. Why is it a council problem? Abandoned trolleys should be treated like any other scrap metal dumped in the street. It is the onus of the loser to report the loss or theft of an item to the police - it is up to them to place identifying markings on the trolleys so that they can be reclaimed - if neither of these actions take place they should be scrapped after 28 days. If there are certain areas of the town which abandoned trolleys are more of a problem could a scheme be set up that involves people/children to collect them for a fee who live in that community. Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river life possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trolleys comething the Council can semidified the council can semidified to support it, this may be something the Council can | CCTV in trolley hotspots | |
| Repurpose them in the community. Why is it a council problem? Abandoned trolleys should be treated like any other scrap metal dumped in the street. It is the onus of the loser to report the loss or theft of an item to the police - it is up to them to place identifying markings on the trolleys so that they can be reclaimed - if neither of these actions take place they should be scrapped after 28 days. If there are certain areas of the town which abandoned trolleys are more of a problem could a scheme be set up that involves people/children to collect them for a fee who live in that community. Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river life possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trolleys can be council can deal with, lowever if an individual is caught dumping the trolley and there is evidence to support it, this may be something the Council can | , | |
| Why is it a council problem? Abandoned trolleys should be treated like any other scrap metal dumped in the street. It is the onus of the loser to report the loss or theft of an item to the police - it is up to them to place identifying markings on the trolleys so that they can be reclaimed - if neither of these actions take place they should be scrapped after 28 days. If there are certain areas of the town which abandoned trolleys are more of a problem could a scheme be set up that involves people/children to collect them for a fee who live in that community. Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river lf possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trolley rather than the curpormarkets. | be bothered to recover themselves. | |
| like any other scrap metal dumped in the street. It is the onus of the loser to report the loss or theft of an item to the police - it is up to them to place identifying markings on the trolleys so that they can be reclaimed - if neither of these actions take place they should be scrapped after 28 days. If there are certain areas of the town which abandoned trolleys are more of a problem could a scheme be set up that involves people/children to collect them for a fee who live in that community. Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river lif possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trolley rather than the guaramenters. | Repurpose them in the community. | |
| the loser to report the loss or theft of an item to the police - it is up to them to place identifying markings on the trolleys so that they can be reclaimed - if neither of these actions take place they should be scrapped after 28 days. If there are certain areas of the town which abandoned trolleys are more of a problem could a scheme be set up that involves people/children to collect them for a fee who live in that community. Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river life possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trolley are then the proper than the proper transplant of the proper transplant in the council can be something the Council can be somethed to the property should be somethed to be somethed to the property should be somethed to be somethed to the property should be somethed to be som | Why is it a council problem? Abandoned trolleys should be treated | |
| to them to place identifying markings on the trolleys so that they can be reclaimed - if neither of these actions take place they should be scrapped after 28 days. If there are certain areas of the town which abandoned trolleys are more of a problem could a scheme be set up that involves people/children to collect them for a fee who live in that community. Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river life possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trolleys rathers than the support state. | like any other scrap metal dumped in the street. It is the onus of | |
| can be reclaimed - if neither of these actions take place they should be scrapped after 28 days. If there are certain areas of the town which abandoned trolleys are more of a problem could a scheme be set up that involves people/children to collect them for a fee who live in that community. Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river look at dealing with individuals who remove thallenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trolleys rather than the supermarkets. | the loser to report the loss or theft of an item to the police - it is up | |
| If there are certain areas of the town which abandoned trolleys are more of a problem could a scheme be set up that involves people/children to collect them for a fee who live in that community. Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river life possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trolleys rather than the supermarkets. | to them to place identifying markings on the trolleys so that they | |
| If there are certain areas of the town which abandoned trolleys are more of a problem could a scheme be set up that involves people/children to collect them for a fee who live in that community. Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river If possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trolleys than the supportant to look at dealing with individuals who remove trollies wilfully. That in itself is not an offence that the Council can deal with, however if an individual is caught dumping the trolley and there is evidence to support it, this may be something the Council can | | |
| more of a problem could a scheme be set up that involves people/children to collect them for a fee who live in that community. Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river If possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trolleys rather than the supermarkets. | | |
| Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river If possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trolleys tables than the supermarkets. | • | |
| Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river If possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trolleys rather than the supermarkets. | · | |
| Challenge Residents Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river If possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trolleys rether than the support and the support and there is evidence to support it, this may be something the Council can | | |
| Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river If possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trolleys rather than the supermarkets. | community. | |
| Track who took them and charge them (criminally and financially) Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river If possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trolleys rather than the supermarkets. | | |
| Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river If possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trolleys rather than the cunormarkets. | | |
| If possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trolleys systems that the council can be support it, this may be something the Council can be caught. | | |
| Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trolleys rather than the supermarkets. Individuals who remove trollies wilfully. That in itself is not an offence that the Council can deal with, however if an individual is caught dumping the trolley and there is evidence to support it, this may be something the Council can | Use CCTV to capture individuals throwing trolleys into the river | |
| challenged. They should not be allowed them to be kept for personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trolleys rather than the cunormarkets. | If possible fine the ones who remove them by looking on cctv, | |
| personal use as an eye-sore in a street. Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trolleys rather than the supermarkets. | Residents who store the trollies outside of their property should be | |
| Fine the people that dump the trolleys. With all the cameras that have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trolleys rather than the supermarkets. Council can deal with, however if an individual is caught dumping the trolley and there is evidence to support it, this may be something the Council can | · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · | • |
| have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trolleys rather than the cunormarkets. | personal use as an eye-sore in a street. | |
| Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trallege rather than the supermarkets. | · | |
| ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trallegy rather than the supermarkets. The deally the person who dumps them should be fined but that and there is evidence to support it, this may be something the Council can | have gone up lately, surely the culprits can be caught. | |
| would be difficult Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their trollogs rather than the supermarkets | Ideally the person who dumps them should be fined but that | |
| Checking CCTV and if possible fining customers who abandon their something the Council can | | |
| trallove rather than the cupermarkets | | |
| W. W. W. C. C | trolleys rather than the supermarkets | address. The Council is |

| | mindful of the resources needed to undertake this sort of activity. |
|---|---|
| Catch the trolley fly tippers and fine them. The supermarket will | |
| pass on any fines they receive to the customers. | |